CHARRED SKELETON OF TWISTED METAL MARKS THE SPOT WHERE 35 AMERICANS DIED IN CRASH OF BIG ITALIAN DIRIGIBLE

Eleven Survivors of Tragedy Blame Faulty Construction for Catastrophe. Liberty Motor Declared to Have Gone Dead

(International News Service)
HAMPTON ROADS, Va., Army Supply Base, Feb. 22.—A charred skeleton of twisted metal today marked the spot where 34 American army birdmen died in the crash of the semi-dirigible Roma, once pride of the Italian air forces.

There are 11 survivors of the crash and the terrific fire that made a funeral pier of the trapped airmen. Those of the survivors able to talk today blamed the catastrophe on broken controls and a liberty motor that "went dead."

The Roma was making its first flight after liberty motors had replaced the original Italian engine. The airship, after rising above its hangar, at Langley Field, crossed Hampton Roads in a long, sweeping circle.

While above the bay the ship developed "head trouble," according to survivors. She nosed downward, settling slowly at first but in a few minutes driving earthward at an angle of 45 degrees with increasing speed.

The big engines were silent and the bag floated. It grazed electric overhead wires running along a camp roadway, tore several away, and crashed into the midst of piles of army junk. A terrific blast of flame followed with a deafening roar. Calm observers declared the flames leaped 800 feet in the air.

The whole ship burst into flames and for an hour minor explosions occurred as tanks of gasoline blew up. Army firemen and men from the naval army bases on the Hampton Roads side of the bay rushed to rescue the imprisoned airmen. They were unable to effect any rescue for an hour as the flames prevented approach.

Out of the maze of stories it was apparent today that the crew and passengers of the Roma, for the most part, "never had a chance to escape." Trapped beneath the falling envelope they were blasted into blackened, shriveled corpses in the first great explosion that followed the crash. The handful who escaped either dove from the cabin just before the crash, or else landed in deep gulches that crisscrossed the field on which the Roma fell.

These gulleys provided protection from the blasts for a few. The bodies of the dead, most of them charred beyond hope of recognition, lay in a morgue at Newport News, Va., across the bay from the scene of the catastrophe.

Sergeant Thomas A. Yarbrough, of Selma, was the only Alabamian killed so far as could be learned. Lieutenant Wallace C. Cummings, of Springfield, Tenn., was also killed in the crash.

Air service officers were quick to point out today that the ZR-2 and Roma disasters were not dissimilar. In the case of the ZR-2 it was faulty construction which caused the huge ship to buckle and fall. In the case of the Roma it was presumably the same faulty construction which caused one of the elevators to slip and throw the ship out of control.

The twin disasters to the great dirigibles, both of foreign design and manufacture, caused air service officers to seriously question the policy of dealing with foreign type of these ships. The Roma was of Italian construction and the ZR-2 of British construction. Both had been purchased by this government. The navy is particularly interested because it is now negotiating for a German Zeppelin of the most advanced type to be built in Germany under American supervision. Work has not actually begun on the new ship yet because of a hitch in the financial arrangements. One result of the Norfolk disaster, air experts asserted today, would be to advance the use of Helium gas supposed to be non-inflammable. The Roma, so far as is known, was filled with ordinary hydrogen gas and officers said today if Helium had been used the disaster undoubtedly would not have reached the proportion it did.

The first explosion which followed the crash of the big ship was presumably caused by the ship coming in contact with high tension electric wires. The use of Helium gas would have averted the explosion and if not preventing the fire would have, at least, prevented its magnitude and terror.

Three investigations into the crash are being conducted by Major General Patrick, chief of the army air service, Lieutenant Colonel Arthur Fisher, acting commandant at the flying field and Major E. L. Kennedy, summary court officer.

CONTINUE EXPERIMENTS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Though the Roma disaster has struck another chord of horror to the mass of American people the United States will not cease its experiments to conquer the air by lighter-than-air craft development, Julius Kahn, chairman of the House military affairs committee, declared today.

"The 34 men who lost their lives in the catastrophe are martyrs to the cause. Their sacrifice must not be in vain and the United States cannot permit other nations to continue developments of air craft and stand idly by. We must keep abreast with the world. It is to be hoped that enough Helium gas, which is not inflammable, can be produced for all our lighter-than-air crafts. The pity is that this substance was not available for the Roma," Kahn declared.

DETROIT SUSPECT ADMITS HE KNOWS WHO SLEW TAYLOR

(International News Service)

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 22.—Declaring that he was in Los Angeles the night William Desmond Taylor was murdered and that he knows and would disclose the identity of Taylor's slayer, Harry N. Fields, confessed dope fiend and convicted forger, today made a statement in which he told Chief of Police Edward H. Fox his detailed movements the week of the crime.

Fields was arrested for the Detroit police in Buffalo, N. Y., February 6 and returned here for trial on a forged charge. He was convicted February 11. In an effort to verify or disprove the statement of Fields, the authorities today are questioning the man, searching for details of the crime.

Chief Fox declared there was no serious conflict between the accounts Fields gave of the shooting.

Negroes Taken To Cullman By Deputy

In the custody of a deputy sheriff from Cullman, Claiborne Jones and James Walker, negroes, were released from the county jail here today and carried to Cullman to answer to the charge of burglary and grand larceny. The goods stolen at Cullman were alleged to have been sold here and were identified by E. C. Kinney, of Cullman, as his property.

SEWER ORDINANCE PROVIDING LINE TO COST $3,100 GOES ON FIRST READING

NO PROGRESS MADE ON SALE OF SCHOOL BONDS
Austinville - Albany Highway
Will Be Repaired Jointly
By Municipalities

The Albany city council met in regular session last night with all the aldermen present. President of the council H. O. Cline, presided and at his request City Clerk Henry Hartung read the minutes of the previous session which were adopted.

Reports showed that 100 young firs, water oaks, elms and maples, were recently planted on the city park property near the green house; that new street lights were being installed according to contract by the Alabama Power company; that Second street West Albany, was soon to be graded and cindered, so as to make it more passable, especially for the fire trucks and engines in case of fire; that a new fire plug is to be placed on Sixth Avenue North, just across the Louisville & Nashville switch line, to be paid for jointly by the cities of Albany and Decatur, final disposal to be made by Mayors Nelson and Payne.

On Its First Reading

A sewer ordinance was put on its first reading and passed, providing for new sewers near the Aviation park, to serve the residents on Eighth Avenue, Seventh Street and Prospect Drive, South. Engineer Marion S. Bingham read this ordinance and explained its provisions.

This work, if ordered, by final passage at a subsequent meeting, will cost in the neighborhood of $3,100.00. Attorney Tidwell reported that no progress had been made as to the sale of the new school bonds ordered in the recent city election. Complaint was made that plumbers were thought to be in the habit of not locating the "Ys" in the city mains, when connecting sewer pipes, and it was directed that the chief of police look into this matter and report.

Rejected Unanimously

The proposal of the Southern Bell Telephone company, that it be allowed to cut whatever trees in the city limits that might be obstructing its telephone wires and which had previously been referred to the proper committee, was rejected by unanimous vote of the council, on the ground that the ordinance desired made no provision for caring for the natural beauty of the trees.

As usual at its opening, the council invited any citizen to make any suggestion he or she might desire, and speaking first under this head Judge W. E. Skeggs was heard in protest against the erection of certain proposed buildings on Moulton street, East, the Judge claiming that the buildings were not keeping to the specification.

CHATTANOOGA MEN ON WAY TO SHOALS TO BE ENTERTAINED

Arrangements are under way for the entertainment of members of the Chattanooga chamber of commerce here tomorrow. Fifty members of the organization will stop off for an hour and a half on their way to Muscle Shoals and have agreed to accept the hospitality of the Albany chamber of commerce and the Morgan Kiwanis club.

From information given out at the chamber of commerce office, the Chattanooga party is due at the Decatur landing at 10:30 tomorrow, but to insure no loss of time or inconvenience, Council Elliott has agreed to get in touch with the party by wire when it reaches Guntersville and report its progress. Committees have been arranged for, from both the Kiwanis club and the chamber of commerce, to have charge of the entertainment of the visitors. Among other things an automobile ride over the cities and visits to the exposition are planned.

STATE VICTOR IN COFFEE TAX CASE

Montgomery Bureau, Albany-Decatur Daily

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 22.—Every appeal from the tax assessment fixed by the tax adjuster of Coffee county was decided in favor of the state and county by the court of county commissioners, according to information received at the capitol today. The vote of the court was three to two on the appeals.

Shortly after the supreme court held that a tax payer had the right of appeal from the adjuster's assessment every year, many appeals were taken in Coffee county. The decision of the court of county commissioners means that the tax assessments of Coffee county will not be reduced one penny.

It was in Coffee county that the tax records were stolen and it was necessary for the state and county to duplicate the records last year.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 22.—(Special)—Governor Kilby issued an order Tuesday afternoon declaring a general holiday at the capitol in honor of the birthday of George Washington. He instructed various departments to look after only the business which cannot be carried over until the next day.

GUARANTEES TO MEET OBJECTIONS OF COMMITTEE MEMBERS WILL BE MADE MAYO SAYS ON RETURN FROM DETROIT

Henry Ford's Chances To Get Muscle Shoals Are Declared To Have Been Bettered Materially As Result

(International News Service)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Henry Ford's chances to obtain Muscle Shoals were materially bettered today when W. B. Mayo, his chief engineer, returned to Washington after a conference with Ford at Detroit and assured members of congress that Ford is willing to modify his offer to meet objections which have been raised to it by members of the house military affairs committee.

Representatives of the Alabama Power company will be heard before the committee closes hearings on Ford's offer and takes up their proposal. Chairman Kahn announced today that there would be no decision from the committee on any of the offers until all have been fully considered.

The committee's recommendation then will be transmitted to the house, probably in the form of a resolution directing that Secretary of War Weeks be empowered to enter into a contract with the successful bidder.

Even after the conclusion of the proposed hearings on the Alabama Power Company's offer and the offer of Frederick C. Engstrom, of Wilmington, N. C., which is expected to be sent to congress by Secretary Weeks, the committee expects to take up at least two weeks sifting the varied testimony on the worth of the respective proposals before submitting its recommendations.

Two of the principal objections to the Ford offer, which have been raised here, will be met by the modifications which the Detroit manufacturer is willing to make, Mayo informed members of congress.

One of these is the lack of guarantee in the existing contract that Ford will produce fertilizer, Mayo said that Ford will guarantee to produce a certain amount of fertilizer if congress approves his taking over the plant.

The other objection relating to the development company which Ford will form to operate the plant will be met by Ford specifying the amount of capital that will be invested and other details of organization.

Pleas of 1,500,000 farmers in the United States for congressional approval of Ford's bid were presented to the house military affairs committee today. Grey Silver, representative of the American farm bureau federation, claiming to represent that number of farmers, charged that a well defined propaganda is going on to prevent Ford from having an opportunity to develop the great hydro-electric power project.

He declared the farmers resented this propaganda and firmly believe that Ford will give them cheaper fertilizer.

Silver took issue with statements of previous witnesses that fertilizer cannot be successfully and profitably produced at Muscle Shoals. He denied that leasing the project to Ford would be a subsidy.

"Neither Ford nor the farmer wants a subsidy at Muscle Shoals," he told the committee. Silver presented resolutions adopted by the American farm bureau federation at Chicago in 1920, Atlanta, Ga., and at Florence, Ala., in 1921, endorsing development of Muscle Shoals for the manufacture of fertilizer.

Farmers believe that if Ford obtains the lease of Muscle Shoals he will produce steel and that as a result the present high cost of steel in farming implements will be eliminated, Silver told the committee.

He presented for the committee's record a letter to Secretary of War Weeks, in which he suggested floating a $40,000,000 bond issue to provide for completion of Wilson Dam on the Shoals property. The letter pointed out that in Silver's opinion such procedure would obviate the necessity of further drain on government finances for the project by sale of developed electrical energy.

MINERS READY TO FIGHT SAYS LEWIS OPENING PARLEY

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—"We are ready to fight. We are not yet convinced they will make us fight, but we are ready to go through." John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, hurled this challenge at the coal operators today in his opening address to delegates convened here to discuss the formation of a "defensive alliance" between the miners and the railroad workers of the nation.

Lewis was cheered as he pleaded for the moral support of the miners in the wage fight by the railroad men and organized labor in general.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 22.—Southern Ohio coal operators today refused to accept the invitation of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, to meet with representatives of union coal miners and other operators in Cleveland on March 2 to discuss a proposed new wage scale effective April 1 for the central competitive field.

KILLING SPACE IN THE AIR

MANKIND'S NEWEST AMBITION.

There is a mania now for annihilating space and reducing time. Men and women no longer are contented to jog along in a buggy behind a horse that is not in a hurry to get anywhere except to its feeding trough, they no longer are willing to put up with the rather lively speed of street cars. They even show irritation when speeding thirty miles an hour on a railway train. Even a fifty mile an hour train does not give quite the thrill they wish.

This is a fast age. Innumerable automobiles, most of them going faster than is safe for occupants or pedestrians, tend to prove it. People go in motor cars because they can go faster in them. They soon may find even the fastest motor cars lacking in the element of speed and may try the airplane as a new mode of swift travel. That is, the most daring and the most restless may do so. The average man and woman who does not care to be hurried violently into eternity probably will cling quite a while to the automobile, for it has some speed ability of its own when the driver steps on the "gas."

Hansch, a Hollander, has devised an airplane which he says will travel 312 miles an hour. That would take him across the American continent in ten hours. It would carry him through space faster than five miles a minute. It would make the landscape below look like a receding blur. And most of us in such a plane would be glad to get safely down to the ground again. It is too fast for safety or comfort, and almost too fast for thrills.

But at the rate people are seeking speedy ways of traveling, 312 miles an hour will not appear especially swift 25 years from now. Speed prophets already are saying that airplanes in this century will travel from New York to San Francisco in an hour—about 50 miles a minute. Such planes necessarily would have to be provided with appliances to prevent them catching fire from friction of such terrific speed through the air.

Hansch says his flying speed isn't of first importance. He claims his new airplane, of the Helicopter type, can stand still in the air and rise and descend vertically. Hard to believe, isn't it? But then, few things are impossible now. The garage of the future will have its doors in the roof.

Hansch, being committed to faster and more wonderful airplanes, may give the world soon individual planes, little fellows that we can use like we once used bicycles on the ground, leap on them and run quickly to the point we wish to reach. Then people would be able to reserve the solid ground for sleeping and working and do all of their traveling and play in the air. Or he may give us great trains of airplanes, wonderful air coaches in which we can travel in the comfort and elegance a great ocean liner now provides. Then a trip by air would be a luxury. But before any of these things are provided, he should fix it so that when an airplane comes to grief in the air, it really will stand still until the occupants can get down to earth with specially provided parachutes or by some other means, probably more safe.—Anniston Star.

IT IS ALWAYS A GOOD TIME TO BUILD A HOUSE, BUT NOW ESPECIALLY.

There ought to be a perpetual campaign on to encourage those who contemplate building a home to do so, and to encourage those who have the capital for extra home building to build them. Any argument based solely on dollars and cents when it comes to home building, amounts to little. There is pure pleasure in building a home, much less in living in one, and dollars and cents cannot measure such pleasure. But the financial argument is very strong at this time for more home building. Whereas labor and material have come down some since the war days, rents have not declined. The reason there has been no decline in rent, is mostly due to the fact that there is such a deficiency in the number of houses. Because rents are still high should tend to cause the rent payer to build a house, and for the same reason it will be a good investment for capital to put it into a house. Besides the "experts" are predicting an advance in the cost of building materials. Certainly if their predictions are to come to pass, NOW is the time for wide awake people whether renters or landlords to get plans and materials and begin to build. It is pointed out that the "experts" who prophesy a rise in building costs are not all numbered among dealers in building materials. It is said that the road making people in a number of states are hurrying up their new road construction, believing there is going to be an advance in the price of stone, cement, and labor. If the road contractors are right, and there is to be an advance in road-making material, it is perfectly safe to say that we are to have a rise in the cost of putting up homes and other buildings. Besides credit has greatly improved during recent months. And the spring time is coming, always a good season in which to build.

There can be no denying, that it requires considerable courage and determination to build a home or a house of any kind. The extra strain necessary to finance such an undertaking, and the extra work and thought necessary—all these matters are hard to deal with, but once started—a little extra courage, and presto, the thing is accomplished. Nothing in the world but the spirit of procrastination, where people are financially able, is keeping prospective builders, from going ahead with some new building enterprises. But always, delays are dangerous, and especially would

WHAT SHALL THE HARVEST BE?

This is the big expectant idea just now in the minds of those who wring from the soil those products with which a world is clothed and fed. From the time the first act is done toward pitching and planning the crop for the year, the dominant idea is, what shall the harvest be.

Some have said that there are entirely too many farmers who are not literal dirt farmers; that they can farm alright until they come to the dirt and there they fail. Whether true or not, there are certain fundamental facts about farming and the revenue to be derived from the effort, and suggestions some time from those who are not actually engaged as dirt farmers, is sometimes valuable.

The farm, as we understand the term, is the place where those products are raised that are supposed to be raised thereon of such a variety as the soil and climate will permit, and of such a kind as is required for use every month of the year by the farmer and his family, the surplus to find its way to the markets and there supply the needs of those who depend on the dirt farmer for the products of the soil, and is returned to the farmer in cash, and represents his surplus over and above what is required for his household.

The plan of raising of those things that can be profitably grown in the locality where one resides and not depend on other sections or states to do for us what we can do for ourselves, would seem a mighty good plan to adhere to the present year and all other years. If this plan be adhered to, the question of what shall the harvest be, will not be so much in doubt.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

Today is Washington's birthday. More than a century has passed since Washington led the foot sore soldiers at Valley Forge. When called to the presidency of his country his conduct of office was of that high order that characterized him the first American. His counsel to his countrymen; his simplicity of manner; his ideals that founded this great Republic; his tenacity to those things which he deemed right in the conduct of a great nation; his farewell address; giving that advice which he knew was correct, has caused the name of Washington to linger, and there is not a school boy in all the land who is not conversant with the life of this illustrious American.

Time has not dimmed the love and admiration in which he is held, and wherever an enemy to oppression breathes the pure air of life; where liberty is sweet and tyranny galling, there the name of Washington shines out in resplendent glory. The great of all nations have paused at his tomb to place a wreath and drop a tear.

Well might we pause today and ask the question; what would Washington have done under conditions that exist today, and how would he dispose of the big questions that are up for action at that time?

BUILDING DISASTERS.

To the Knickerbocker disaster, must now be added the hotel fire disaster at Richmond, Va. Nine of its guests perished in the flames when the Lexington hotel in the Virginia capital, was burned a few days ago. Such hotel disasters are few, as the traveling public has begun to demand adequate fire escapes, and besides most modern hotels are as nearly fire proof as possible. Where the danger lies is in institutions where the inmates are confined without their consent, such as schools, asylums, hospitals and prisons. There are laws aplenty, requiring adequate protection from fire, in the equipment and erection of all public buildings. Where new public institutions are erected, such legal provisions are doubtless carried out, but reports show that in many instances old public buildings have not been provided with sufficient equipment against the great dangers from fire. Responsibility for the safety of the inmates, especially of hospitals, asylums and jails, lies with the public, and any neglect on the part of society for its wards is nothing short of criminal. Public officials, and citizens generally should interest themselves in seeing that all public buildings are properly provided with sufficient fire escapes, or else make them fire proof. No excuse can be found for the non-enforcement of our laws, as to the safety of public buildings and the general public should tolerate no negligence in this important matter.

Who can estimate the value of a beautiful tree. Under its spreading branches the children of all time have come to play, and rest beneath its inviting shade. The birds have builded their nests therein, and the summer breezes have fanned the boughs as little birds in nests swung in their well constructed woven swings. The weary laborer has gotten new energy from a rest beneath its sheltering leaves, and the storms of many years have only caused it to sink its roots deeper into mother earth and become more secure for the future. They who plant a tree know not how much pleasure they are planting for those of the future. They who will ruthlessly destroy a fine tree do so unthoughtfully no doubt, for the least thought will reveal the fact, that wrapped up in a tree is the possibilities of great pleasure and benefit to those who come on.

Judge Landis is worldly wise. He did not give up his old job until he got his hand in as National Base ball umpire.

Just as neither parent is inclined to blame the child directly for misbehavior, so the general public hardly ever thinks to blame the law breakers, until every thing and every body else has first been made to blame. In other words personal responsibility has never been a very popular doctrine.

Let us hope that all the recent good offers to operate the Shoals, will die early just as did the good little boys in the old story books.

Another curious thing about the explanation proposition is that they have explained why he come to make it. Big business is not in the habit of making explanations.

MOTHER GAVE IT

Virginia Lady Suffered With Aches and Pains Until Mother Began Giving Her Cardui.

Dublin, Va.—Miss Mary Alice Hughtt residing on Route 2, near here, recently told a visitor of her interesting experience with Cardui. Miss Hughtt said: "I had been suffering for some time with painful... I was pale, didn't feel like going. Would just drag around, and couldn't rest to do any good. I would suffer once a month with my back, sides and head. My limbs would ache and I didn't know what to do, but I knew I must do something, for I didn't get well by letting it run on. "My mother is a believer in Cardui, for she saw what it did for others as well as herself, so she began giving it to me.

"It wasn't long before I saw a change. It was just what I needed. It regulated me. I began to eat and sleep, and the pain stopped. "Cardui is without doubt the best female tonic made, and I am glad I can recommend it to others." If suffering with symptoms such as Miss Hughtt mentions, or other ailments peculiar to women, why not begin Cardui at once? Its merit is well established by successful use for more than 40 years. Try Cardui.

Bee's Keen Eye for Landmarks.

How is it that a bee can fly all over a town, and yet invariably come home to the hive in the evening? There can be little doubt so intelligent an insect as this has a long memory and a keen eye for landmarks. This is testified to by the fact that almost all bees fly by day, whereas such creatures as moths, of no fixed home or occupation, fly in the darkness. A bee would be lost at midnight because it could not recognize its surroundings.

Analysis of the Kiss.

In analyzing the psychophysiology of the kiss, Professor Malespine says: "The kiss is the first animal manifestation of love. The passionate look is nothing but desire. The handshake is full of reserve, of constraint, or full of hope. The kiss is simply another and more exquisite manifestation of the sense of touch than the handshake. And it is from the sense of touch that all other senses are derived."

ADVICE TO GIRLS

by ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am 20 years old, and engaged to be married some time in the spring. My mother objects to my marriage, because of the fact that my fiancé's father died a few years ago with tuberculosis, and he has a brother now very low with the same disease. My fiancé has no symptoms of the disease now, I am sure, but mother is afraid he might take it later. I love him, and wouldn't like to hurt him by telling him why my mother objects to our marriage. I love my mother, too, and do not want to displease her, especially in a matter of this kind, when I know that her interest is all for my own welfare. Please, tell me what I ought to do.

DORIS: Why do you not explain to your fiancé your mother's fear, and ask him whether in order to reassure her he will go to a doctor for a thorough physical examination to learn whether there is any symptom of the disease present, or any likelihood of its developing later? If the physician thinks that it will be safe for you two to marry, your mother's objection will doubtless be removed. Your fiancé will not be hurt by your telling him when he realizes that it is not a personal matter, and that a note from the doctor declaring that there is no danger will relieve your mother's anxiety. Of course, if there should prove by any possible chance to be danger in such a marriage, you would both respect the physician's advice in the matter.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of 20 years, and have been engaged about two months to a boy I met one year ago. He says he loves me dearly and wants me to be true. He goes to parties without me, and denies it when I tell him. He says it's only gossip.

Do you think I should break the engagement or believe him?

MILLO.

MILLO: If you love the young man enough to marry him, you should have faith in him and believe him when he tells you something. If you are positive that he tells you an untruth, then speak to him about it. But unless you are absolutely sure, believe him before you believe others.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of 18. I am very fond of several boys a few years older than myself.

One I like especially well, but when I am with him he insists upon kissing me.

Every one does kiss nowadays, and all my friends who go with boys say that they kiss them.

They all say I am very foolish not to allow him to kiss me, and sometimes I really want him to. Should I listen to this boy and my friends or never let him kiss me?

WILD ROSE.

WILD ROSE: Don't let any young man kiss you unless you are engaged to him, my dear. You will only cheapen yourself if you do. Although the young man may not like your refusing him, he will respect you a great deal more because you do refuse. Your girl friends will think more of you, too, although they may not admit it to you.

Année Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

Do You Realize How Helpful Lemons May Be to Your Beauty?

By LUCREZIA BORI

The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

LUCREZIA BORI

Thinking that the most efficient beautifiers are necessarily the most expensive.

There is one very ordinary item which has widespread uses outside of its more usual functions of seasoning sauces, flavoring salad dressing and making soft drinks. This is the lemon. It is perhaps the least expensive beautifier which can be procured, and at the same time the most widespread and effective in its uses.

So when you are using all means at hand to enhance your beauty and to make a well-groomed appearance, remember that you will be overlooking your biggest aid if you forget the lemon. You probably always have a lemon or two in the ice-box, and you may be in the habit of throwing away what is left after you have squeezed the half-lemon for salad dressing or some lemon drink. Remember, today, to form the habit of laying that half-lemon aside. Put it in a corner of the closet shelf or tuck it in the ice-box where it will not be in the way, and where you will see it as a reminder.

Then when you wash your hands, rub the lemon thoroughly over them. If your hands are inclined to become chapped this will do much to prevent chapping, and at the same time whiten your skin to a marked degree. If you are engaged in housework or in some occupation which necessitates washing your hands frequently, try rubbing them with lemon instead of washing. The result is equally as cleansing as water and less chapping, and your hands will be in better condition than if you washed them too often.

Dig your finger-nails deep into the ridges of the lemon, and move them from under your nails, and give them a transparent whiteness. It also helps to prevent hard bits of skin from forming at the corners of the nails, which are unpleasant and detract from the beauty, while cutting with the sharp points only makes them come back in worse form.

Many disease germs are destroyed by contact with lemon juice. When you have a cold, take lemon juice, seasoned with a little sugar, and it will do much to relieve the thick feeling in your throat. At any time when you have been out in hot, dusty crowds, or in places that you felt were reeking with germs, rub your face with a piece of lemon and, rinse your throat with lemon juice when you come in. The germs which may be about your person cannot withstand the attack of the acid of the lemon juice.

When your feet are tired and sore, bathe them in warm water and then rub them with equal parts of lemon juice and alcohol. You will immediately feel rested and wonderfully refreshed.

Pimples and blackheads are removed as quickly by application of slices of lemon as in any other way. Simply rub them with the lemon. A good time to do this is nightly, after you have washed your face in warm water to open the pores.

Notice how many expensive creams contain lemon, and you will realize your advantage in having at hand the beautifying lemon in its purest form.

NATIONAL WEEK OF SONG

What are the purposes of the National Week of Song? This was answered in some of our printed literature, but as it would be well to have them fixed in mind, we re-state them briefly as follows:
First: To awaken the singing spirit and set all America singing.
To cultivate a taste for songs of the better sort.
To bring people together in their various communities and develop the community spirit.
To develop and strengthen the great American spirit and uphold its high ideals by the singing of such songs as uplift and inspire.
To amalgamate and give spectacular expression once a year to all of the various efforts put forward to establish community singing by the various organizations throughout the country.
These are some of the things that the National Week of Song is accomplishing. It is true that some of them are being accomplished by some other organizations whose purpose it is to help establish community singing, but it is believed that the establishment of the National Week of Song will hasten the realization of these things we all desire. The fact that the event is to be observed on a National scale makes it somewhat spectacular, therefore, it will receive considerable attention by the press of the country. This means that more people will learn of what is being done to establish community singing than they would by any other means of publicity.

"From the time I was a small boy up to the time I got Tanlac I was subject to attacks of indigestion. I was brought up on all the old fashion remedies, but only got temporary relief, and as soon as I would eat a bite or two of something I was suffering again. For 10 years before I got Tanlac I couldn't work with any satisfaction at all.

Road Repair To Austinville.

Andy Roper, and other citizens of Austinville, spoke on the need of more road repair work between Albany and Austinville. It was finally agreed that Albany should make all needed repairs as far as the city limits of Austinville, and that Austinville people should do all needed repair in their own city. S. B. Allen, appeared before the council, stating that he was suffering from blood poison, and requested the free right to vend fruit in the city limits, and his request was referred to the relief and finance committee; Chairman Williams of the latter committee assuring Mr. Allen that his request would be reported on soon. A number of requests were made for such sewer arrangements in different parts of the city, as would guard against disease, especially during the summer months.

The Way the Circus Almost Broke Up.

LILLIAN is the sanest mother I know. I never have known her to "take sides" in any controversy which her small daughter has had with another child. Besides, Lillian is able to see Marion's faults as well as her good traits, and watch both develop with a humorously smiling viewpoint, as well as an intensely devoted one—a combination as rare as it is praiseworthy.

But that secret she is a passionate partisan of her child's in any dispute I guessed long ago. I knew it when I heard her draw her breath in quick, abnormally as Mary Harrison's childish voice sounded in the cruelly contemptuous decision:

"You're not going to perform. What can you do?"

But there was no other sign that her interest was greater than mine, though indeed, mine was tense enough as I waited to see what Marion would do.

For a second or two Marion did nothing. She stood absolutely motionless, and I knew that she was so astonished by the sudden rudeness that she had no words. Then, with an air that a grown woman might have envied, she said quietly:

"Where—You Go?"

"I can't do much, so I guess I don't know enough to be a circus either."

She turned on her heel and walked toward the house, and we—who could see her face while the others saw only her retreating back—witnessed a marvelous sight for self-control. In the child's up-flung face, with its crimson cheeks, its tightly closed lips, and in her tiny clenched hands.

"I knew she wouldn't cry," Lillian's whisper was a note of triumph, and I too, rejoiced that the little girl had so justified the training her mother had given her.

From the head of the "parade" there came a frightened, disappointed yell, as Jerry Tier, his face black with anger, snatched Roderick from the back of the old cavalry horse, deposited the child on the ground, and stalked away, leading his horse and whistling to the police. As he went, he picked up a cage containing a small pet raccoon.

"Where—You go?" Mary quavered.

"I'm goin' home, that's where I'm goin'!" Jerry retorted.

"But—but—the menagerie and the riding horse."

"They're goin' right with me," Jerry declared. "I only come into this old show, and brought my things, because Marion was in it, and if she ain't goin' to be in it, there's nothin' doin' with me or my things."

The most astute diplomat could have taken pattern by Mary's quick shift of base, as she saw the necessity of yielding.

"Are You Quite Sure—?"

"Aw, don't be such a silly!" she said contemptuously. "Can't you or Marion take a joke? I didn't mean anything by telling her that. I'm sure I don't care how much she performs. Come on, Marion, come back. You can perform anything you want to do. What do you want to do first?"

Marion's advance was as prompt as her retreat had been. And there was no rancor in her voice or manner as she answered cheerily:

"I don't mind. I'd just as soon be audience for awhile, and take my turn later."

"All right," Mary was the business-like director again. "You sit right over there," indicating a large stump, "and we'll start the tumbling."

The small girl and her brothers staged the usual stunts which athletic children who have seen a big circus always imitate. They did them creditably, but with nothing unusual about their execution, save the dramatic fire which Mary Harrison managed to cut like every part completely, and her elfin face was like a kaleidoscope in its swift changes.

"Depend upon it, the world will hear from that girl when she grows up. If that old mother of hers will only keep her hands off."

Lillian spoke meaningfully, and I realized that, even her interest in her own daughter's triumph had been tempered by her altruistic admiration for this stranger child's ability.

"That is no doubt true," I retorted a bit peevishly, for I am not as big a woman as Lillian, and while my anger at Mary Harrison's rudeness and selfishness had subsided, I was not yet in a frame of mind to admire anything about her.

"But Marion can give her cards and spades in those stunts she's doing now, and still beat her, can't she?"

"Are you quite sure about that, Margaret?" a silkily sweet voice said from the open door, and I realized, as I turned and saw my sister-in-law standing in the doorway, that my voice had been raised unnecessarily, and that she had heard every word I had said.

STORIES OF SEIZURE OF RUM BY PLANES
ARE CALLED DREAMS

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—Prohibition officials today were inclined to characterize as "hooch dreams" stories coming northward from Florida that a fleet of 11 air planes had captured the schooner Annabelle with 11,000 cases of whiskey aboard here. "It's queer we don't get any report on the seizure. We have not heard a word. Also we haven't any airplanes down there that I know of," said Prohibition Commissioner Haynes.

Officials said it would be hard to imagine 11 air planes volunteering to aid the work of law enforcement by capturing a rum ship.

Mine Strike Case
Is Won By State

Montgomery Bureau, Albany-Deatur Daily)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 22—The first of the criminal cases from Jefferson county resulting from the coal strike in 1920 and 1921 was won by the state, Tuesday afternoon when the court of appeals held that John Arnold, striking miner, must spend nine years in prison for manslaughter in the first degree as a result of the death of Green Cook, negro miner, who refused to join the strike.

Cook was killed in a battle between strikers and non-striking September 17, 1920. The battle occurred near the Majestic coal mines and evidence was offered to show that Cook and other non-striking were enroute to their work when they were halted by striking miners. There was conflict in the testimony regarding the side which fired first, but when the smoke of battle cleared away Cook was dead. Coroner J. D. Russum and others testified that death resulted from buck shot.

The court of appeals held that no error occurred in the trial and that the sentence of the jury must be carried out.

REVENUE ACT OF 1921 IS EXPLAINED

Numerous inquiries have been received regarding the proper interpretation of Section 223 of the revenue act of 1921, which provides that each individual whose gross income for 1921 was $5,000 or over shall file a return regardless of his or her net income, says a statement by W. E. Sneed, collector.

Gross income means statutory gross income, defined by the revenue act to include "gains, profits and income derived from salaries, wages or compensation for personal service * * * of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, trades, business, commerce or sales or dealing in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in such property; also from interest, rent, dividends, securities or the transaction of any business carried on for profit or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever."

Gross income does not necessarily mean gross receipts. A merchant, for instance, in computing statutory gross income, should deduct therefrom the cost of goods sold. For example, a merchant may have gross receipts amounting to $10,000, but the cost of goods sold amounts to $7,000. He has no other income. The statutory gross income would be $3,000. In case the other deductions allowed him for business expenses, taxes, interest, bad debts, etc., amount to $2,500 his net income would be $500. No return of income is required in this case.

A lawyer who is married and living with his wife has gross receipts in the form of fees amounting to $6,000 and his necessary business expenses amount to $4,800, leaving a net income of only $1,800. A return will be required in this case, as taxpayer's gross income as well as gross receipts is $6,000.

Fools Will Always Try.
Perhaps if it were more generally known that a locomotive smashes up a motorcar beyond repair as well as kills the family, there'd be fewer attempts to beat the train over the crossing.—Kansas City Star.

Kansas Family Problem.
An Emporia family takes the family dog to church once in a while. Last Sunday the dog was tied to the motor car during the services. Every time the choir sang the dog howled. It was a question whether to take the dog away—to keep from disturbing the peace or stop the choir to keep from disturbing the dog.—Emporia Gazette.

DIPLOMATS WILL TOUR THE STATE

Alabama will be the guest on March 2, 3, and 4 to three of the most prominent Latin-American diplomats who are at the present time representing their respective governments at Washington and who will tour the state in the interest of the Gorgas Memorial, which is an international movement to honor the memory and the achievements of the most illustrious son of Alabama, the late Major General William Crawford Gorgas.

The memorial meetings in honor of General Gorgas will take place in Birmingham on March 2 at the Tutwiler hotel, in Montgomery on March 3 where the party will be the guests of Governor Kilby and in Mobile on March 4.

Senor Don Federico Alfonso Pezet, ambassador of Peru will head the party of Latin-American diplomats, who will arrive in Birmingham on the morning of March 2. The party will be met at the station by a state committee of 100 prominent men and women. A reception will be held in the ballroom of the Tutwiler hotel at 10 o'clock in the morning for the distinguished guests. In the afternoon the party will be taken for an automobile trip through the city's industrial center, visiting a number of the larger plants in and around Birmingham.

Thus another big impetus is expected to be given the campaign for funds for the school in honor of the late General William Crawford Gorgas, surgeon general of the United States Army and a native Alabamian. Ambassador Pezet and his party also will attend meetings in Montgomery, on the third, and Mobile on the fourth.

The memorial meetings will be on a party with the memorial services held in the hall of the Americans Pan-American buildings, Washington, on January 26, 1921, when representatives of all the European and Latin-American republics paid tribute to the great Alabamian who had given his life for his fellowman.

Hydrogen in Atmosphere.
The bureau of standards says that hydrogen occurs in the atmosphere to some extent. This is the lightest gas known. The second lightest gas, helium, also occurs in small amounts. Nitrogen is the lightest gas occurring in sufficient quantities to materially affect the density of the air.

TIDWELL POINTS OUT WHAT OFFER MEANS TO VALLEY

Declaring development of Muscle Shoals by the Alabama Power company will result in transmission of current to distant places and thereby making the Shoals a liability to the Valley, Tennis Tidwell, city attorney of Albany, today issued a statement attacking the power company's bid from a new angle.

He said the diversion of the power to distant places will result in the Tennessee Valley will furnish the resources which will make for the building up of the large cities and centers and will be referred to as a section possessing natural resource of untold value, but without sufficient initiative to reap any of the benefits therefrom.

Mr. Thomas W. Martin, president of the Alabama Power company, according to an Associated Press dispatch published in the Birmingham Age-Herald on last Sunday in discussing the bid of the Alabama Power company for the acquisition of Muscle Shoals, said:

"We have carefully considered the large market demands in Memphis and Nashville districts, in Mississippi, Louisiana, New Orleans and Mobile, as well as the economical advantages of supplementing by interconnection the power supplied for industrial purposes in the cities of Georgia and North and South Carolina."

Further on in his statement Mr. Martin expressed confidence that the entire output of Muscle Shoals would be promptly absorbed and he further declared that the policy of his company would be, if the offer was accepted,

"To make as wide a case as possible of this great resource at Muscle Shoals."

People of the Tennessee Valley who are contiguous to Muscle Shoals and who should be more vitally interested in its development than the people of any other locality, should carefully weigh this statement of Mr. Martin for therein rests the danger. The Alabama Power company proposes to develop the power possibilities of Muscle Shoals solely as a commercial proposition and all electric power developed will be contracted for and furnished to public and private consumers. If this power can be successfully carried to New Orleans and the Carolinas, then it can be successfully carried to Louisville and Cincinnati and other remote cities and centers to say nothing of Atlanta, Little Rock, Memphis, Chattanooga, Nashville, Birmingham, Jackson, Meridian, Montgomery and Mobile, and if it can be successfully carried to the large centers then the power developed will, as Mr. Martin says, be promptly absorbed by these centers and the only benefit which will ensue to North Alabama or the Tennessee Valley will be the temporary benefit derived from the expenditure of some thirty million dollars in the completion of the development and the additional benefit which will be derived from the infinitesimal number of employees the power company will employ to keep the machinery in repair and operation after development, and both benefits will be local and referable largely, if not entirely, to the cities of Sheffield, Florence and Tusculumbia. The power company, we know, is managed by capable business men charged with the duty of so managing the affairs of the company as that interest obligations on bonded indebtedness can be met, dividends paid and a surplus created and if this vast enterprise is turned over to this company the officials of this company will not wait for manufacturing interests to locate industries in territory contiguous to Muscle Shoals but will immediately arrange for the company to carry the power to the large centers where the industries are already located and ready to absorb the power or to use a common place expression, "where business is." A public utility like the Alabama Power company cannot function in any city or municipality without a franchise. Long term franchises are the rule and not the exception. All public utilities insist upon long term franchises and municipalities granting the franchises in turn generally stipulate for uninterrupted service for and during the life of the franchise. We may well anticipate that the power company upon entering a large city will demand a long term franchise. We may also well anticipate that the city granting the franchise will stipulate in the franchise for continuous service during the term thereof. The power company will not therefore be inclined to divert the power from the large cities and will be powerless to effect such diversion even though it had the inclination. The power possibilities of Muscle Shoals though undeveloped are an asset to the Tennessee Valley but the development and diversion of these possibilities to other sections will be a liability. The Tennessee Valley will furnish the resources which will make for the building up of the large cities and centers and will be referred to as a section possessing a natural resource of untold value, but without sufficient initiative to reap any of the benefits therefrom.

Jud Tunkins says a special delivery letter is worth considerably more than a quarter if it's as important as the girl who receives one usually seems to think.

Respectfully submitted,
TENNIS TIDWELL.

Trade Days Are Very Successful

The first trade days, staged by the merchants of Albany and Decatur in connection with the opening of the Tennessee Valley Industrial Exposition, proved very successful, reports from retail establishments today indicated.

The days were featured by large business from points in the North Alabama counties, while home people also took a large part of the event. It is probable the movement, which has proven successful in many sections, will be repeated here at intervals.
